The Sun's Water Board Report

By Elizabeth Cowley

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) Board of Directors held its regular monthly meeting on April 15 at the Monterey City Council Chambers.

The MPWMD decided to hire 3 consultants to study and evaluate water supply options at a cost of $40,000 to $55,000. The consultants will study desalinization, recovering storm water flows from the Carmel River for injection into the Seaside aquifer and retrofitting with low flow fixtures.

The MPWMD Board formed an ad-hoc committee to prepare testimony to be heard by the Public Utilities Commission regarding Cal-Am's request for a rate increase. Cal-Am has applied to increase rates beginning in 1997 which would increase revenue about $3 million over three years. The rate increase includes a high consumption surcharge and a low income rate. The committee will receive public comments on this issue until April 26 and will present its findings at the next MPWMD meeting on May 20. To comment on the proposed Cal-Am rate increase, contact the MPWMD at 649-4866.

Helen Rucker of Seaside said that the low income rate may harm low

Loud Call To Respect Water Realities

Fran Farina and Patricia Bernardi have retained attorney Jane Haines to persuade the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) and Cal-Am to take immediate steps to comply with State Water Resources Control Board (SWRCB) Order 95-10. The state order ruled that 10,730 acre feet (AF) has been illegally diverted from the Carmel River by Cal-Am and orders that a replacement source be found. Bernardi and Farina are asking that the MPWMD prepare a rationing plan, institute a moratorium on new water connections and rescind Ordinances 74 and 75 which provide water credits for retrofitting.

Farina and Bernardi both supported

Mello Backs Off a Bit on Water Snatch Plan

Senator Henry J. Mello (D-Watsonville) announced that, at the request of Mayors and Supervisors within the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, he will be drafting amendments to change the direction and implementation of Senate Bill 1951.

"All reference to a successor agency will be amended out of the bill", said Mello. "The Mayors and Supervisors expressed a strong desire to become more actively involved in solving the water problems on the Monterey Peninsula and I believe the amendments will work toward that end," he added.

After discussions with constituents, the consensus of the Mayors and Supervisors was that they could better serve the Peninsula by amending the bill to encourage the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to regularly consult with the land use agencies and their respective elected bodies to better manage water resources.

Career Senators Seldom Get White House

Bob Dole has given the Republican party a remarkable lesson in how to use the established power of his tenure in Washington to force his selection as the GOP presidential standard bearer.

He is not the first of long tenure to garner his party's nomination. Yet, in this century, John Kennedy was the only Senator to win the presidency. Interestingly, Kennedy was short on tenure and long on vision and image.

Vision and image are not Dole's long suit. This makes Ross Perot, United We Stand and the Reform Party a very viable conservative/libertarian choice. Perot and his followers continue to command 14% to 18% of real voters, even without having selected a presidential candidate.

There is not a poll in the world that promises that Dole can count on solidarity among the 30% to 34% of hard-core Republicans.

Should Perot become the actual nominee of the Reform Party, most pollsters claim that the Reform Party will jump to 18% to 24%. That could leave as little as 42% for Clinton, still over half a year until the election in November.

Dole is perceived as an old intellectual vacuum, who may know how to cut deals in Washington but has no executive experience. At an hour in life when Dole should be making retirement plans and writing his memoirs, he lacks that image of vitality and vision we demand of our presidents.

In spite of an ongoing barrage of demeaning media coverage, Perot now seems to stand forth as a man with wisdom, integrity, vision and vitality. Perot is no Ronald Reagan for image, but Perot is not a professional actor.

For those who are disgusted by the mealy-mouthed reign of Bill Clinton, who at his peak of popularity has barely topped 50%, Perot is a shining alternative.

The question for Republicans is: "Is party loyalty sufficient reason to support Dole and assure four more years of Clinton?"

WHAT'S NEXT? Mel Vercoe

I probably had left Berkeley before the Unabomber went there to teach math. Wouldn't have seen him, anyway. Spent most of my time at the Radiation Lab on the hill. A recent news item says he had an article in Saturday Review in 1970. I think it was in 1968 that they published an article of mine. Maybe he commented on it. Actually, the only time I ever read that magazine was when they sent me a check for my article. How's that for being patriotic?

Anyway, my article described my "fireless smoke" invention, an improvement over the present system of lighting a fire in one end of a cigarette, and sucking air through the cigarette (and into the lungs) to keep the fire from going out, which is one of the more dangerous ways to ruin a set of lungs, because discarded cigarettes sometimes set fire to other valuable things, like forests, mattresses, etc.

To avoid that danger, I proposed that the tobacco be burned at the cigarette factory, with the smoke compressed into spray cans, shaped flat, like the original Prince Albert cans, for convenient carrying in hip pockets. A smoker, desperate for a smoke, could attach an adapter to the can, (flavored, or with a little electric built-in heating unit for people who like a hot smoke). The smoker then puts the adapter in his mouth, holds his nose, and presses the release button.

In other news, our President, in Japan to assure them, (our allies), that we are going to keep our 100,000 troops close by to protect them from our former allies, the Chinese. There won't be any cameras in the dining room, this time. Here in America, (with the world's highest per-capita employed attorney rate), we - our people in Congress, adamantly refuse to get real about our no longer workable criminal justice system. Well, what would you do if you were in Congress, turn your back on all of your attorney friends, simplifying the system and putting your friends in unemployment lines?

And in the Middle East, we can be proud that our financing and our donated weaponry and our expertise are really doing a nice job on the refugees in the camps in Lebanon. Wow, just think of the possibilities if there was some way to make those refugees look like communists, instead of just refugees. Gotta hand it to Menachem Begin, the original "terrorist". He really got a good thing going, for U.S.-Middle East relations.

Water District Faces the Revenge of a Mean Old Term Limits Reject

by Andrew Bender

Almost every community has a traffic intersection that not only drives motorists up the proverbial wall but makes us wonder if it was designed by a road engineer in a drunken stupor. Indeed, as you peruse the surroundings of these intersections, it seems that some of the design complexities could have been avoided.

I am one who believes that some road intersections, as well as some other products of mankind, have been deliberately designed to continually irritate the users; but not necessarily due to a drunken spree -- usually for more substantive reasons.

My favorite anecdote in this regard involves a disgruntled engineer in Santa Barbara who didn't get the promotion he felt he deserves. Close to retirement, he vengefully encouraged and approved a tortuous design for a heavily used overpass, in order to permanently "get even with his community" for failing to adequately recognize his work contributions.

That's what came to mind when I first heard Senator Mello propose that the Monterey Peninsula Water District Board be restructured to include only mayors and county supervisors, instead of the very sensible make-up it currently has -- five members elected by area, plus a local mayor and the county supervisor for that district.

My take on why Mello came up with this plan was reinforced by the outcome of a public hearing recently held to get feedback on the plan. Not one among the many diverse speakers from the audience favored the proposal. Yet that didn't change his mind.

A few years back Mello responded to a grassroots effort in the Salinas Valley that sought to separate the Monterey County Water Resources Agency (MCWRA) from the Board of Supervisors, which had been its only governing board. (The MCWRA was then known as the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District.)

While the impetus to change the name and expand the functions of the county water agency came from its management and other public officials, the impetus to change the governance (control) of that agency came from the citizenry.

At a series of hearings in 1991, a large number of citizens presented fourteen reasons in all for wanting to shift control of the agency away from the supervisors. Major among those were that supervisors have too many issues to deal with, countless meetings and functions to attend, lack specific expertise, have conflicting interests, etc.

As expected there was much resistance, especially from the Board of Supervisors, to this demand for a separate governing Board for the county wide water agency. Supervisor Karas, among other officials, strongly opposed the idea, warning of much higher costs, even though the only change we were requesting was in the makeup of the governing Board and its independence. In other words we were asking for a different chauffeur, not a different vehicle.

As a result, those hearings were getting nowhere. So a compromise proposal surfaced to create a second governing board which, like a planning commission, would be advisory to the Board of Supervisors on major county water management issues, but have final say on day to day matters.

The nine member Board of Directors that emerged has now existed over four years; held meetings once or twice each month; conducted public study sessions almost as often; and formed many committees which meet monthly. All on the one subject of county water management -- though the main focus all along has been on the Salinas Valley.

It didn't take long before the Supervisors were singing praises of the amount and quality of work done by this new, subordinate Board. And despite inevitable problems and the many competing views on how to resolve the Salinas Valley's ongoing water problems, not one person in or out of government has suggested going back to the old way of governing the agency (MCWRA), though there is still strong desire to create a fully autonomous Board.

Yet in the case of the Monterey Peninsula, Mello wants to move in the opposite direction. And given his unyielding stance in face of total opposition, it is likely that this plan of his to reform the composition of the MPWMD board, if it succeeds, will come to be known as "Mello's revenge"...revenge against the electorate for having enacted term limits via the initiative process, which is now forcing him out of the Senate.

A footnote: according to a recent poll of legislators, lobbyists, journalists and legislative staff, reported in the non-partisan "California Journal", Mello ranked 33rd in the 40 member Senate for "problem solving", and dead last for "integrity."

LETTERS to the Editor

Is Carmel Valley Ranch Sneaking Over Population?

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Are residents of the Valley aware of the current proposal by Carmel Valley Ranch for rezoning of their development in Area F? This development, which extends along the slopes behind the golf course and west of the Lodge, is zoned and approved for 64 single family homes.

Carefree Resorts, the present owners of the property, are requesting a "vistor-serving" designation for Area F, so that future owners of the homes, who may be only part-time residents, may rent them out to guests of the Resort by the week or month.

Whether we call this time-sharing or short term rental, it represents a substantial intensification of use, when compared with the provisions of the Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan, which this community fought so hard to achieve in the mid-1970s.

That Plan provided a balance between residential and resort uses, a balance which was already disturbed last year by subtracting 25 homes and adding more hotel units.

The new "visitor-serving" proposal, a further departure from the Plan, was turned down by the Carmel Valley Advisory Committee on April 15, by a close 4-3 vote, but that will not hinder its progress through the County Planning Commission unless there is concerted opposition by Valley residents.

Davi States Position

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Thank you to the voters.

I would like to express my sincere gratitude and appreciation to all the volunteers, supporters and voters who helped with the March 26th election. I am proud to have received such broad based community support.

The issues of preserving our environment, maintaining our quality of life and solving our water situation so that we can find "water for us" are the issues I will continue to campaign on. The 5th supervisorial district needs bold new leadership to represent our community at the county level. I am prepared to be that public servant.

As a lifelong member of this community and fourth generation native of the Peninsula I am committed to working for the voters of the 5th district. The November runoff is several months away and I am looking forward to that race after such a strong showing in March.

In November, you (the voters), will be making the decision about who is the best qualified to represent you at the County level. Who has the proven track record of fiscal responsibility to manage a 380 million dollar budget and the wherewithal to find more efficient ways to operate our government like a successful business? I do, and I want to represent you

I thank the over 10,200 voters who voted for me and the over 3000 residents who signed my petition to place me on the ballot. With broad based community wide support, together we can win once again in November.

COMPUTER TALK

Val Healey

Part 7 - An introduction to computers at a naively simple level

A binary number system is one that has just two numbers, say 0 and 1, - and it is said to have the base of two. The arithmetic that we all use is called decimal and has a base of 10; it has ten numbers 0 through 9 and then all other numbers are formed using these ten. There is also the octal system, which has the base of 8, and then a very peculiar system that is used extensively in the computer field called hexadecimal, often abbreviated to "hex", in which numbers are represented by both letters and digits, or as it is said, alphanumerically. The decimal digits 0 through 9 are written similarly 00, 01, 02...09 in hex. Then decimal 10 is A in hex. 11 is B...15 is F. After this, decimal 16 is 10 in hex, 17 is 11, 18 is 12...25 is 19. Then 26 is 1A...etc, etc. Enough is enough. Most calculators, including the one in Microsoft Windows (hereafter we will call this Windows), can be used to convert from hex to decimal or vice versa. Being able to convert hex addresses into decimal is often necessary when installing a new card in a computer and an unused memory address must be found. Reference books on computers often have tables showing the decimal equivalents of octal, hex, etc.

In the last part we looked at the ASCII-8 binary code, in which 8-bit strings of zeroes and ones are used to represent the characters. We also saw that all communications inside a computer, and from computer to computer, are via such strings. If we now have two components in a computer coupled by an 8-wire copper cable, or by copper wire pathways in a printed circuit board, it is possible to transfer 8 bits at a time between these components. Assuming that the software is written for a particular application (word processing, image editing, modem transfers, etc.) to perform these 8-bit transfers, this is called an 8-bit operation. These are rarely used nowadays but there are still many 8-bit sound cards around. These are cards that are plugged into the motherboard and are needed to play sound - voice, music, etc. - from compact disks, sound files, etc. through loudspeakers. They are of quite low quality and should be avoided; instead get at least a 16-bit card.

If we have 16 wires or pathways,, instead of 8, then two 8-bit strings could be transferred at a time. If the components and software can handle the 16 bits at a time, then we have a 16-bit operation and applications should run twice as fast as the 8-bit ones. The ubiquitous DOS is an example of a 16-bit operating system (os). Windows version 3.11 or lower (3.0, 2.0 or 1.0, "gasp") is a strange os hybrid that runs on DOS. There are millions of computers around the world using them and thousands of applications are available for them. There are also 32-bit operating systems in use today, e.g. Windows 95, Windows NT, OS/2-Warp, Unix, Linux, etc. with far fewer applications, but software developers are catching up fast. These do not use DOS, in fact DOS has reached a dead end. The vast majority of word processing packages now in use, or available for sale, are 16-bit but the faster 32-bit versions are appearing. Most 16-bit applications for a particular os will run on the corresponding 32-bit os, e.g. most WIN 3.11 applications will run on Win 95. However 32-bit applications will not run on a 16-bit os and a 32-bit Win 95 application will not run on OS/2 Warp. Applications are bought for a particular os. Note that the pathways within a computer are often called busses and even in mainly 16-bit computers there can be many 32-bit, or even 64-bit busses between certain components. The sizes of the busses increase with the power of the computer.

Erma Bombeck asserts our washing machines swallow single socks and, return them in a later cycle as a sweater. Members of the Beardstown (Illinois) Ladies Investment Club pooled their monthly $25 contributions in 1992 to buy 50 shares of Wolverine because their new Hush Puppies were so comfortable. I met someone the other day who plunked down $1913 in 1990 to buy 200 shares of Chalone, Inc. because the annual shareholder's meeting is a winetasting garden party... "free". She also bought 1000 shares of Advanced Oxygen in 1984 because she heard they were developing a breathing system for divers which behaves like gills. It can be argued whimsy is part of our nature, and hence part of our markets.

I cannot suppress a smile when I see "fundamentalists" and "chartists" predicting what certain stocks will do in the market based on their numbers and graphs; the same names were given to religious groups earlier in history. Perhaps it can be argued investing is an act of faith.

The Beardstown Ladies' Hush

Puppies stock has split twice and grown from $14 to $30 a share; their $700 investment is now worth $6000. My friend's Chalone, Inc. stock is worth $2075; not dramatic, but she is excited about the shareholders' meeting next month. She doesn't talk about gill breathing, probably because her $1200 investment in Advanced Oxygen is now worth $30.

I haven't seen the sweater yet, but the partners to single socks in my drawer probably haven't reached critical mass in the washing machine. Like they say, it will all come out in the wash, if it feels right it probably is right, keep the faith and don't buy anything that sounds fishy.

built in 1941. Our primary goal is to preserve the Airfield and its open space. In the following paragraphs we would like to share with you some of our plans and concerns associated with such an undertaking.

First, our master plan for the Airfield, is to build eventually up to eleven hangar type homes on the north side of the field for those interested in vintage/antique aircraft. A hangar home is very much like a conventional home with a garage for an airplane. By developing these few homes we will be able to preserve the airport and a majority of its open space. The first phase of this project will be building three homes on the existing lots of record. Other projects in the works are the construction of an old antique water tank and the clearing of brush and trees which are safety hazards for aircraft.

The architectural style of the homes planned is a rustic style - typically found on a Vintage Airfield. A local architect, Dennis Hodgins AIA, is making every effort to successfully blend the planned Airfield homes with the Carmel Valley Village character.

We invite you to stop by our home to review our plans and an architectural rendering of a typical home.

Next, much to our chagrin, we must address the "L" words: Lawsuits and Liabilities. In short, in order to satisfy our insurance company we need your help. We need to minimize the risks of accidents due to the mixing of pedestrians, dogs, cyclists, horses and aircraft. To accomplish this, we request that you help us with the following:

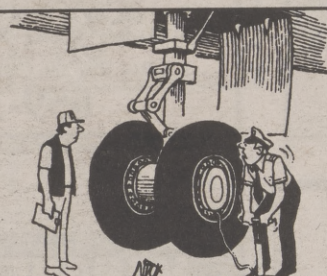

1. keep all dogs on leashes while on the Airfield property. A dog being hit by a landing aircraft could cost a human life, let alone the dog's.
2. Don't use headsets/earphones. It's important to hear approaching or taxiing aircraft.
3. Stay clear of the runway, except when crossing, and make sure to look both ways. Landing aircraft make very little noise.
4. Use the taxiway, bike and walking trails for walking and jogging.

We ask that you and your children follow these simple guidelines so that we are not forced into fencing off the entire property by our insurance carrier. We have already had to fence portions of the property to prevent the abuse of a few and would prefer to let people enjoy the land as open space as they have in the past.

We thank you for taking the time to read this first Airfield update. Please let us know if you have any ideas or suggestions. We hope you share our concern to preserve this land as open space and see the value in our plan on how to do this.

income families because of the high rate of absentee landlords who will not qualify for the low income rate and will raise the rents of the low income tenants to recover the cost of the overall rate increase.

The second reading of Ordinance 83, which will allow non Cal-Am well production on Quail Lodge property to be exchanged for Cal-Am service for the Quail Meadows subdivision, passed unanimously. The Quail Lodge wells will cut back their non Cal-Am production by 20 acre feet and Cal-Am will be able to increase its production by 20 acre feet to supply the Quail Meadows subdivision. Henrietta Stern, MPWMD Senior Project Planner, assured the board and the audience that there will be no increase in overall production from the Carmel River.

The MPWMD unanimously approved the annexation of the Bishop Water Company by Cal-Am. Bishop Water Company serves property on the North side of Highway 68 including York School, Laguna Seca Estates, and an office park. The water company is to be operated separately with no intertie to the Cal-Am system. Henrietta Stern said that Cal-Am's purchase of Bishop Water will not result in an increase in production nor will it impact the Carmel River watershed and there will be no emergency intertie to the rest of the Cal-Am system.

Property owners at Laguna Seca Estates expressed concerns about the quality of water, which is very poor, adding that they frequently have to replace water fixtures and heaters. Bishop Water customers currently pay about half of Cal-Am's average rates and property owners were concerned about rate increases. Larry Foy, from Cal-Am, said that Bishop Water will be operated separately with a separate rate schedule and that water customers can lobby the Public Utilities Commission if Cal-Am applies to increase rates. Patricia Bernardi, Carmel Valley Property Owners Association board member, commented that Cal-Am has not had the money to build a new water supply project, yet they have been buying up a great number of small water companies. Ms. Bernardi wondered where the money was coming from and was concerned that the Health Department may require Bishop Water to hook up to the greater Cal-Am system due to the poor water quality. The Health Department has required 'emergency tie-ins' for other small water companies that Cal-Am has bought including Ryan Ranch and Carmel Valley Mutual.

The MPWMD Board unanimously approved a petition by Santa Catalina School to waive District Rule 23-A which requires a separate meter for each water user. Santa Catalina is building a dormitory and 4 faculty apartments and due to the plumbing design, a meter for each user would not be feasible. The stated intent of Rule 23-A is to provide individual responsibility for water use and to aid in tracking water use in the event of rationing. To fulfill the intent of the rule, the architects will install in-line flow meters.

Darby Fuerst, General Manager, reported that the MPWMD is now on-line at <http://indian.monterey.edu/mpwmd>. The web site is temporarily being provided through California State University at Monterey Bay to enhance public understanding and knowledge of the district.

Director Haddad reminded district staff to follow up on obtaining Fort Ord property which is being made available to government agencies. A move to Fort Ord would reduce MPWMD rent expenditures.

The next regular MPWMD meeting will be held on May 20 at 7 pm at the Monterey City Council Chambers.

the New Los Padres Dam as a means to comply with Order 95-10. The dam was defeated in November of last year however, the SWRCB granted Cal-Am an interim right to divert up to 11,285 acre feet (AF) annually from the Carmel River, ostensibly to give it time to develop a new project. Cal-Am's interim right expires in November of 1997 and the SWRCB has not said what will happen after this date. Farina said that Cal-Am has verbally expressed its intent to comply with the state order but that "really making sure it happens is where Pat and I come in - through legal prodding".

Cal-Am has a legal right to a total of 7,376 AF; 3,376 AF from the Carmel River and 4,000 AF from the Seaside aquifer. Farina said "The good news for Carmel Valley is, under the permit for the (current) Los Padres Dam, the 2179 AF recognized under that permit has to be used in Carmel Valley - it can not be exported."

Farina and Bernardi say that rationing is inevitable after Cal-Am's interim right expires and that the MPWMD has to prepare for rationing between 47% (wet year) to 70% (dry year). Bernardi said the MPWMD "does not accept the fact that they do not have a right to 70% of the water", adding that a lack of preparation is going to create a hardship for the community and the Carmel River. Bernardi said "Even if Cal-Am proposes a project, it will take a long time to become operational."

Bernardi said "Each new service connection between now and the time Cal-Am's interim right expires will necessitate that more users share the same amount of water." To lessen the impact of the inevitable rationing, Bernardi and Farina are asking the MPWMD to institute a moratorium on new water connections and to prohibit any water use intensification. Bernardi said "It is not OK to continue to build when there is no water."

Ordinance 74 allows each of the 8 jurisdictions within the MPWMD up to 10 AF each for residential remodels and Ordinance 75 gives water credits to cities for retrofitting of publicly owned and operated facilities. Bernardi said "Both (ordinance 74 and 75) rest upon the mistaken assumption that there is water to exchange for the credits." Bernardi said that retrofitting should be required and that Cal-Am could retrofit as part of its compliance order.

At this time, Cal-am has not announced a specific plan to replace the illegal diversions, instead it has been revisiting old projects already dismissed by the MPWMD and/or the voters. Bernardi said "It is not OK for Cal-Am to study 50 alternatives." A March letter from the SWRCB to Cal-Am states "Since extensive investigations into various water supply alternatives have already been conducted, the SWRCB will not consider the Cal-Am proposal to restudy the alternative projects as adequate compliance." Farina said that the district has studied all of the alternatives and it is time to stop wasting time and money and solve the problem adding that she and Bernardi have become involved to see that it is done "on as short a timeline as possible".

Ms. Haines asked the MPWMD to schedule a discussion on rationing at its meeting on May 20. Bernardi said approaching the MPWMD was a "matter of courtesy" giving it the opportunity to do something but said they will also pursue the matter at a state level with the SWRCB, Public Utilities Commission, and State Department of Health. Farina said they are just trying to find relief for the Carmel River and they have to exhaust their administrative remedies prior to going to court adding, "The MPWMD has jurisdiction so we have to make our request to them before going further." Farina added that "Cal-am is the one under the order and under the laws of this state, as a utility, they are required to have an adequate supply for their customers - which they do not have."

Fran Farina was a director of the MPWMD, serving her last year as Chair, however she said, "Being a public official is a great restraint on what you are able to say and do." Farina said she is glad to be free of having to be the spokeswoman for the district and happy that she can now say and do what she wants as a private citizen.

Bernardi, who was a MPWMD Director and is currently Chair of the Water Management Committee for the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, said "I have fought for the life of this river for at least 18 years." Bernardi said that she and Farina are "Merely two citizens in Carmel Valley who are putting up their own money where their mouth is."

"Okay...you go down first!"
